Playgrounds, Pump's To Open Monday, Full Program Planned

Monday is the magic day for children of all ages.

That's the day when the town's seven playgrounds and Pump's pond begin summer activities.

A busy schedule of activities for all children has been arranged, according to George F. Snyder, director of the playgrounds and Donald Dunn, supervisor at the pond.

The playgrounds this year will offer competitive sports, tournaments, arts and crafts, and a varied game and play program, Snyder explained.

Pump's Pond

At Pump's pond, there will be classes for junior, intermediate and advanced swimmers, divers, classes in water ballet and synchronized swimming. There will also be special classes for adults and attention will be given those persons with special problems, Afternoons at the pond will be given over to recreational swimming, he explained, with the classes scheduled in mornings and evenings.

Playground Assignments

At the playgrounds, Mr. Snyder has announced the following assignments: Central, William Igoe, Carlene Erickson and Margaret Madden.

Ballardvale, Paul Lanni, Nancy Brookover, Kathleen Doyle; Shawsheen, Herbert Sullivan, Nancy Greer Smith and Anne Marie Walsh.

At the Indian Ridge playground will be Dorothy Walsh and Mary Anne Faggiano. Joan Barnard will be at the West Parish playground mornings and at No. District in the afternoons.

Miss Gail Griffin will be arts and crafts supervisor this year, he announced, rotating her visits to all playgrounds.

Competitive Sports

Again this year, baseball, softball and volley ball will be major morning activities at all playgrounds.

Mr. Snyder pointed out that teams from the various playgrounds will be in competition, with the definite possibility that playground teams will play teams from Lawrence during the summer.

Operating from 9-12 and 2-5 p.m., the playground committee has requested that all pre-school age children be accompanied by an adult or an older, responsible person.

Different Hours

In Ballardvale, the playground hours will include an evening session until 8 o'clock. The North District playground will operate in the afternoon from 2-5 and the West Parish playground will have supervision in the morning from 9-12.

Other activities during the summer will include various shows, including pet shows; the annual outing of the playgrounds will be held and the annual carnival will be held in Ballardvale, Mr. Snyder explained.

Pond Activities

At Pond's pond there has already been considerable activity, according to Supervisor Dunn. He pointed out that some 1500 persons crowded the area last Sunday although it did not officially open. The recreation committee allowed three of the season's life guards to remain on the beach for protection of the children, Mr. Dunn said.

Work has been progressing there, with some six tons of sand now distributed over the beach; bathhouses cleaned, boats caulked, new 50-foot pier and raft installed, trail cleared and roads fixed. Mr. Dunn said another raft will be put out before next Monday and the new, big raft will be in place by the opening day.

Assigned Duties

Assignments have already been handed out, he declared.

Donald Light, the senior life guard, will have charge of senior lifesaving, advanced swimming and the water shows.

John Lucey, who is now at a Red Cross aquatic school, will be in charge of junior lifesaving classes, intermediate swimming, boating, competitive swimming and the junior lifesaving corps.

Paul Cronin will handle beginning swimmers, diving, the guard house and bulletin boards.

Thomas Lawlor will be in charge of beginning swimmers, picnic area, boating and survival swimming.

Ralph Arabian, the third member of his family to work at the pond during years past, will work with intermediate swimmers, assistant to the senior Red Cross instructor, lifesaving equipment and boats.

Mr. Dunn, in addition to general supervision, will work with intermediate swimmers, junior life-

A surprise shower was given to the four engaged girls and the one married girl in the class of 1955 on Monday, June 13, at the home of the class president, Marcia Tangney.

WNAC, Sunday, June 26, 1:15 p.m.

Garabedian, Audrey Madden, Sara Barsamian, Barbara Carbonetti, and Mrs. Marilyn Carver Pigeon opened their gifts under a decorated umbrella and received bath robes from the senior class girls.

Refreshments and dancing was enjoyed the rest of the evening.

The senior beach party was held at Crane's Beach in Ipswich Tuesday, June 14. Students brought their own lunches and soft drinks were furnished free.

Games of softball, baseball and dodge ball were played in the afternoon.

Because the sun had not been out too strongly that day, the seniors came home with only slight sunburns for which the parents were glad.

Class dinner was held at Rolling Ridge, No. Andover, Thursday, June 16 with turkey as the main course.

Miss Ida A. Grover, who was the guest of honor, received the first year book from master of ceremonies George Henricks. Later, all teachers were presented with yearbooks.

Ruth Santuccio read the class history and Paul Gallant gave the outlook for the class twenty years from now.

Class President Marcia Tangney, told the unusual story about the yearbooks. Because of a truck line strike, the shipment of the yearbooks was delayed and on Wednesday, Marcia and several teachers were escorted by Policeman Roy Russell in the new cruiser to Cambridge to obtain the books. The Cambridge police were also on hand to help if needed.

Student Council President Ernest Clegg presented Francoise Louis with a silver bracelet from the class which had inscribed on it - "Franny - Andover, Mass. - Punchard High - Class of 1955".

Class president Marcia Tangney received, as recognition for being president for the past three years, another silver bracelet inscribed "Marcia Tangney, class of 1955".

Parents of boys 8, 9, 10 years are urged to attend this meeting. Any parent who has no child of that age, but would care to take charge of a den, is also urged to attend.

Appoint Fire Chief Now

It's about time to appoint a fire chief.

A good many weeks have gone by since the unexpected and lamented death of C. Edward Buchan, who served the town well during his tenure as chief. But now it is time for action by the selectmen in choosing a worthy successor.

We believe that the fire department can not operate at peak efficiency with four bosses.

Selectman Sidney P. White is a boss — he signs pay-rolls, takes care of small purchases and other administrative details. This, under the decision by the selectmen that their board should exercise general supervision over the department.

Albert Cole Jr. is a boss. As a deputy chief, he now is one-third of the triumvirate that assumes responsibility for actual fire fighting and training, each for his own platoon. It's safe to say that he would like to be appointed chief.

Henry Hilton is a boss. As another deputy, he has charge of one platoon at the fire station. If a fire breaks out while he is on duty, it's his responsibility, not that of the other two deputies although they may be at the fire. He, too, is believed interested in the appointment.

J. Woodrow Crowley is a boss. He's an acting-deputy in charge of a platoon. He, too, has complete responsibility for the operation of his platoon. Whether he is actively interested in receiving the appointment is not known.

Thus we see the fire department run by four men. Each has sole responsibility over some portion of the department. None can say "I am the boss". Nowhere can the citizens of the community turn when they want to "go to the top". One deputy might have a completely different answer from the next. Mr. White might have still another answer.

It is certainly a tribute to the four men that they have so far managed to operate the department without any public indications of disunity. But we suspect that none of the deputies cares for the situation, in which he is the responsible fire official but lacks the complete authority to assume over-all command.

Rumors have it — and we select the most prominent rumor which is commonly accepted as being correct — that the selectmen will not name a chief because there is not unanimous agreement on the man.

We understand that one selectman has made up his mind while another objects to the suggestion, without offering an alternate. The third selectman, we hear, will vote for whichever man the other two can agree upon.

Seems to us that it is time for the three men, elected to serve their townspeople as selectmen, to get down to cases. The individual member who wants a unanimous vote should, instead, cast his ballot for the person he chooses and let the chips fall where they may.

After all, we live in a country where majority vote decides. There is no need for unanimity just for the sake of not making a difficult decision. Rather, we believe the selectmen should carry their convictions to a logical conclusion and cast their votes.

It's high time we had a fire chief.

"Challenge" Is Keynote Of High School Graduation Addresses

MARCIA TANGNEY

VALEDICTORY

The time for graduation has finally arrived, and the doors to our high school education are slowly closing behind us. As we step from this stage, we are looking, with anticipation, at the possibilities of a bright future. This optimism is quite commendable, and may be used to advantage at some later time when we are most in need of it. Experience with the hard realities of life can lead us into the pitfall of cynicism. On such occasions, recollection of our point of view on this day may serve as a bulwark against any attitude of discouragement or defeatism.

Another feeling has probably found a spot in the hearts of most of us today, that of regret, — regret that we must bring to a close our years at Punchard. The French have a proverb fitting the occasion, which translated, means "To say goodbye always is to die a little." In a broad sense, that is a fair estimate of the mile stone we pass today. As we part company with our teachers, classmates, and with all our curricular and extra-curricular life, the feeling can not be an entirely happy one. But here, just as in many quotations, there may be another interpretation. We may consider that these experiences die in meaning, but not in memory. Time may dim even the memories, but only so that they may be brought to life once again at our class reunions.

We shall probably be the next to the last graduating class to have taken our entire high school careers in this building. This thought makes the occasion slightly more nostalgic for us than might otherwise be the case. But the pleasant fading of our high school years is the prelude to an emergence into an adult life for which we have been adequately prepared by our parents and by our teachers. Any inadequacy will be from ourselves.

The memories of our high school undertakings will always be among our most treasured possessions; but we must be careful not to ponder too long our past experiences. Although we should not disregard the values of days gone by — for it is history which forms tradition — we should direct our thoughts to the road ahead. Just as the driver of an automobile should heed the lessons learned earlier, but concentrate his attention upon the road ahead, we too should plan carefully our future actions, but with the light of knowledge gained in the past.

Let us do our utmost to maintain a straight course, and to keep in mind always not only the immediate picture, but the high ideals of the master plan of which we are but a portion.

THE PERMANENT NATURE OF CHALLENGE

Today this class loses its identity as a unit. Each of us now, as individuals, must determine what we can and will do with the future which lies before us.

To make any major decision or change requires courage. As we move from our comparatively sheltered lives as high school students to meet the challenges of a progressive world, each of us shall face many different situations.

Some of us may become champions of our faith, everstriving to maintain the bright torch of christ-

NORMAN WHITE

SALUTATORY

It is my privilege, on behalf of the Punchard high school class of 1955, to welcome you to our graduation exercises.

For the members of this class, today marks the end of a period in which we have had a great opportunity to gain not only some proficiency in the various subjects available to us, but also a maturing view of life as we have progressed from one stage of learning to the next. We assemble for this final occasion as a class unit with mixed feelings. While we look forward eagerly to the experiences which the future may hold for us, we cannot do so without some pangs of nostalgia for the years we have spent together.

It has been said that a drowning man sees the events of his life unfold before him in the brief moments of final consciousness. While we prefer to regard today's events rather as the beginning of a new and more alert consciousness, we do, nevertheless, feel some of the sensations of a rapid panoramic view of our high-school days. There could be no happier conclusion to them than by being surrounded by those who have played such vital roles in the paths along which we've progressed — our parents, and friends, teachers, and officials of the school department, and our undergraduate schoolmates. To all, we extend a most cordial welcome and expression of appreciation for all that has been done to make this day possible for us.

CRUSADES, PAST AND PRESENT

When we hear the word, "crusade", many of us think of the Middle Ages, the era in which European knights led vast armies to the Holy Land to wrest it from the Turks. The modern usage of the word has gone far beyond the original meaning, so that, in its current sense, it is applied to countless other pioneering ventures.

In our own time, there are socio-political crusades which are comparable to the great struggles of the past. World War II began as a movement against Fascist totalitarianism; and, at its conclusion, that threat to the world appeared to be crushed. Immediately, there rose in its place a familiar nemesis that threatened the way of life to which the Western world had long adhered. I refer, of course, to Communism. The struggle to ward off this tianity as the divine guide for all our actions. If our generation of high school students could produce a leader of the future, whose influence for the good of his countrymen could approach that of Bishop Fulton J. Sheen or Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, we could well be proud of such attainment.

We, who are today concerned about our problems of youth, shall, in large measure, assume the same burden in later years; — but then as parents, trying to build security and contentment for our children. Parenthood is too noble an estate to exist without an equally noble ideal. The romanticists among us may picture the national "mother of the year" as an honored member of society. They might say the same of a father placed in a similar category. The realists, of whom I am one, would believe that the most noble parents are those, who, in the eyes of their own children, deserve the highest recognition, not of their spectacular deeds, but of the deep care and effort with which they fulfill their day to day duties of parenthood. As parents, we shall become what we now call the "old fashioned" generation striving to provide control and guidance for the best interests of the next generation.

In the pursuit of our goal, we are rich in the heritage of great people, who have set for us the example by which we must meet our challenges. There may be those among us who will pursue the adventures of a business career. Opportunities in the field of business are unlimited for an ambitious person. Mr. Charles E. Wilson rose to a position of great prestige in the business world as president of General Motors. When Mr. Wilson was asked to serve as secretary of defense for the United States' government, his interests were turned to another field of public service. Perhaps through the genius of a future businessman or government enthusiast, the securing of a reasonable degree of economic stability will be solved.

The medical profession offers challenges worthy of the respect of all. Although, in recent years, research workers have been at the center of national acclaim in the medical field, we should not minimize the tireless efforts of the family doctor. Scientists, general practitioners, surgeons — some day one of us may be among the many skilled men who are constantly at work to keep America healthy.

There may be those among us who will find that the intricacies of music or art are the dominant interests in our lives. George Gershwin, Richard Rogers and Oscar Hammerstein, Irving Berlin, and many others have shared with all people the musical talents which have afforded them their successful careers. Others of us may find interesting avocations in the fields of music or art. "Grandma Moses" has become a symbol of the possibilities which are as has a universal hobby.

Just as our ancestors have shed their blood on the green at Lexington, the snow at Valley Forge, and many other battle fields, so will our generation resist the threats to the institutions which we cherish most. Military service for most of our boys is inevitable; our homes and lives must be protected against all potential enemies, whether they be those resembling our adversaries in the past, or some vague and yet unknown menace from the world of space.

Factory workers? Teachers? Truck drivers? Secretaries? — In what field shall we fulfill our obligations to society, and, at the same time, earn the enjoyment of its privileges? In a word, the picture of society is a mosaic. Just as the smallest stones in a mosaic are most essential to the complete picture, so every task in society is of great importance in this world of peace and war.

Shortly after our former president, Herbert Hoover, had taken his oath of office, he spoke these words describing our country. They carry a deep significance today to those of us among graduating classes everywhere, hoping to benefit from the great opportunities which our national heritage offers us.

"Ours is a land rich in resources, stimulating in its glorious beauty, filled with millions of happy homes, blessed with comfort and opportunity. In no nation are the institutions of progress more advanced. In no nation are the fruits of accomplishment so secure. In no nation is the government more worthy of respect. No country is more loved by its people. I have an abiding faith in their capacity, integrity, and high purpose. I have no fears for the future of our country. It is bright with hope."

dreaded movement is so much a part of our daily lives, that I do not propose to discuss it further. Perhaps, it will serve better to gain proper perspective of the long struggle of the past between right and wrong, if we here examine some of the more specialized crusades that mankind has waged and is yet waging against the dangers which constantly surround it.

Among these endeavors, none has held more important implications to the welfare of the world than that of medical research. From the dawn of civilization, the world has been swept by such terrible plagues as the Black Death, the Dancing Mania, and Leprosy. The ancient physicians, or "healers", as they were called, had neither the time nor the knowledge to combat these terrorizing ills. Medical research was slow and tedious. When important discoveries were made, they were often subjected to open ridicule by the public. Finally, because of the untiring work of such men as Lavoisier, Harvey, and Pasteur, definite theories concerning the human body were developed and proved.

Fortunately, today, new medical ideas are accepted quite readily by the American public. If it were not for this fact, medicines such as many of the new wonder drugs would be practically non-existent.

While I am considering the subject of present-day medical research, I feel that I should be guilty of a serious omission if I failed to give credit to the thousands of men and women who devote their lives entirely to the well-being of mankind. Thanks to them, we are unlikely to have to fear world-wide plagues again.

Experimentation, research, and discovery in scientific areas have been, by no means, restricted to the medical profession. A crusade the importance of which we are just beginning to realize is the search for a unified mathematical concept of all the laws which govern the universe. The late physicist, Albert Einstein, devoted his life to the search for this particular truth. To the group of mathematicians and physicists whom Einstein typifies, we owe our thanks for such indispensable commodities as radio, television, radar, the telephone, the automobile, and the electric turbine. In their minds lie the mathematical equation which will lead to many unbelievable devices of the future.

History and tradition, frequently the targets of cynics, are too often subjected to reactions ranging from ridicule to violence. We must not forget the value — even the necessity, at times — of interpreting the present in terms of the past; nor, in doing so, should we go to the other extreme, excepting only tradition and experience as guides. It will be helpful to keep in mind the advice of Alexander Pope, to wit:

"Be not the first by whom the new are tried, Nor yet the last to lay the old aside."

Local Women Win In Boston Rose Show

Andover Garden club exhibitors in the New England Rose society's show in Horticultural hall, Boston, last week, received several prizes for their entries.

An educational exhibit, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Charles W. Arnold Jr., received a blue ribbon. Several of Mrs. Arnold's hybrid tea rose entries also were given ribbons.

In the flower show division, Mrs. Byron R. Cleveland, president of the Andover club, received second prize for her luncheon table featuring red roses as a centerpiece.

Honorable-mention went to Mrs. Abbott Stevens for a formal table arrangement of yellow roses and to Mrs. Edwin L. Branley, for an arrangement of red roses in a compote set in a pale green niche.

Among the local club members working on the prize-winning educational exhibit were Mrs. Nathaniel Flowers, Mrs. Joseph Myatt, Mrs. James K. Selden, Mrs. R. Moen Smith and daughter, Grier and the horticultural chairman of the No. Andover club, Mrs. Kenneth Brett.

Library Offers Plan To Eliminate Bad Conflicts Of Public Gatherings

How many times has your organization wanted to run a money-making or social event, only to find constant and perplexing conflicts with other such affairs?

An answer to that problem has been offered by the Memorial Hall library.

Perfecting System

Miss Margaret D. Manning, assistant librarian for readers' service, has been trying for several years to perfect a system of recording the dates of all scheduled events in an open date-book.

It would be immediately available to any organization, making it simplicity itself to determine whether a favorite project would conflict with something already scheduled.

Needs Cooperation

"All we need is the cooperation of the clubs and organizations", Miss Manning asserted. She pointed out that few have taken advantage of the service so far.

Riffling through the all-but-empty pages of a year-round, diary-size book, she told of the many problems which the book could solve.

Paramount, of course, is the basic problem of conflicts. No group likes to run a supper in competition with another such event. Yet, she explained, it happens constantly because the groups have not taken advantage of the library's service.

Solves Conflicts

All a group has to do is send in the dates of its scheduled, public events well in advance of the day they are to be held. As Miss Manning pointed out, there would be ample time for most organizations to list their coming events, for most plans are made well ahead of time.

Easy Checking

Then, any late-comers could simply call the library to determine if the date is open. Finding it so, they could then record their own event, so that no others need run in conflict with it.

Because this is one of the most perplexing problems confronting a busy community, the library has felt that it should offer its services, she explained. But it takes cooperation by all the groups in town to make it work, she pointed out.

Could Be Valuable

Miss Manning urged any organized group, of which there are some 83 at the moment, to make known to the library their plans for the fall and winter, as soon as they are decided. In that way, she asserts, the date-book could become a real service to hundreds of persons in the town.

Hearing Favors Rt. 28 Access in Lowell Jct.

A sometimes scrappy, sometimes happy crowd of some 75 residents put themselves on record as favoring a Lowell Junction interchange for new Route 28 last Monday night.

At the same time, by a 55 to 18 vote, the citizens disapproved the plan to construct an interchange at Osgood st. and Dascomb rd. The vote in favor of the Lowell Junction location was 51 to 17.

Temperatures Were Hot

Temperatures flared at intervals during the two-hour session, called jointly by the selectmen, planning board and board of public works.

Residents of Osgood st. stood up heartily for the present plans, as outlined at a hearing in Boston in May with Commissioner of Public Works John A. Volpe. Mrs. Andrew Pendleton told the meeting that she believed every resident of that street had signed a petition for it.

Mrs. John C. Forbes, however, said she hadn't signed it, bringing the rejoinder that she was away when it was circulated. Mrs. Forbes reiterated her objection to the interchange.

She charged that several residents had also signed a petition opposing the interchange, indicating, she said, the state of confusion existing in their minds.

Taxpayers Association

The hearing also grew lively when Taxpayer Association President George Grant heatedly denied an allegation that he spoke only for himself in urging the Lowell Junction interchange.

Vincent Treanor, a director of the association, made the charge and Grant shouted "I deny that remark. I speak for the association". Treanor then pointed out that a letter sent to selectmen by the association, favoring Lowell Junction, was approved by five of six directors meeting recently.

There are 21 directors, Treanor said, admitting that his was the lone dissenting vote at that meeting.

Other Votes

During their two-hour meeting, the citizens also voted to disapprove dead-ending Chandler rd., dead-ending High Plain rd., and gave unanimous approval to an interchange on Lowell st., Route 133.

The opinions expressed by the citizens were carefully noted by Deputy Commissioner Fred Dole of the state department of public works. Also in attendance at the hearing was Mr. Mallow, a state engineer who will have considerable responsibility for the new highway.

Planning Board Recorded

The planning board, whose recommendations were read by Chairman Kirk R. Batcheller, opposed the Lowell Junction site for an interchange. The statement pointed out that there are few roads in that section to serve the new highway. The board also approved the interchange at Osgood st. and Dascomb rd.; dead-ending High Plain rd., and urged an access at River rd. They also approved the over-pass at Chandler rd.

However, Mr. Batcheller read a letter from Member MacMackin urging the Lowell Junction site and stated that one other member of the five-member board was absent when the recommendations were made.

Selectmen's Position

The selectmen, through Chairman J. Everett Collins, who presided at the hearing, made known their belief that an under-pass should be built at River rd., that High Plain rd., Osgood st. and Chandler rd. should not be dead-ended. Their feelings were contained in a letter sent to Mr. Volpe more than a year ago.

Mr. Collins told the meeting that the precise location of interchanges, over-passes and other details of the road have not been settled, but Andrew Pendleton, a resident of Osgood st., said Commissioner Volpe stated "This is about it" at a hearing some weeks ago in Boston.

Central Street

One citizen expressed complete disapproval of any plan that would make Central st. a major highway to handle increased traffic. He said the highest priced land is along that street, and should not become a "major thoroughfare".

One woman asked where the money would come from when it became necessary to build roads to service the new highway, if the interchange was placed in Lowell Junction. "The state is very generous", responded Selectman Collins.

Several persons also mentioned that the people pay state taxes, too.

Traffic Burden

It was also pointed out that a Lowell Junction location would create additional traffic, causing the widening of two bridges over a river, railroad crossings, would cause traffic to pass two playgrounds and would interfere with fire engine traffic from the Ballardvale station.

PERSONAL

Mr. Malcolm B. McTernan Jr. and sons Malcolm III and Warren of Westfield, N.J., have returned home after visiting for several days with Mrs. M. B. McTernan of Wolcott ave.

S. A. Lindsay Andover Head Of United Fund

STAFFORD A. LINDSAY

Stafford A. Lindsay, a member of the board of selectmen and assessors, will serve again this year as Andover chairman of the United Fund drive.

General Chairman Charles J. McCabe announced the appointment this week, as plans for the fall financial drive began to take shape.

Expressing the hope that the extra time this year will allow time for a better constructed organization, Mr. Lindsay called on Andover residents to support the united fund appeal.

Last year, $38,272.49 was raised in Andover. It was the first United Fund drive held in the Greater Lawrence area.

the planning board.

Result of Joint Meeting

One result of a recent joint meeting between the school committee and the planning board was a decision to plan for school growth cooperatively. The planning board indicated great interest in working with the committee to bring forward whatever recommendations for new schools are to be made in the future.

Doherty Chairman

Chairman of the standing committee will be board Secretary William Doherty. Members of the committee will be School Committeemen Albert Cole and Roy Russell.

Will Work This Summer

They will go to work immediately, Miss Greeley has pointed out, with the purpose of gathering all available information on school needs for consideration by the board this summer. She said an October meeting with the planning board is scheduled, at which time the school committee wishes to be in possession of all information on school planning and needs that is available.

station, said complete tests have not yet been run and preliminary tests would not be conclusive evidence of pollution or purity. The complete test takes a week or more, he indicated.

Dr. Emmons explained this week that the state had taken a sample of the water in Clark's brook on request of the board of selectmen. It was his opinion that nothing serious could have been found.

Mr. Doubleday, meanwhile, was arranging with Dr. Emmons to take additional samples. He said "One sample is like one swallow", "it doesn't prove anything", he continued.

He said it will be necessary for him to take other samples and to inspect the brook before making a conclusive finding on the bacterial content and its cause.

Pl. Bd. Member Explains Stand On Rt. Access

A majority of the planning board apparently no longer supported the board's own recommendations when they were read to the Route 28 hearing Monday night.

"I have no explanation for it", asserted Chairman Kirk R. Batcheller. He said he read the report as a majority of the board had voted at a meeting and what went after that you can interpret any way you want."

Mrs. Virginia Hammond said this week, however, that she had changed her mind following the planning board meeting at which it was agreed that the interchange should not be changed from Dascumb rd. to Lowell Junction.

She pointed out that the strong possibility of getting service roads for the highway at Lowell Junction caused the change in her thinking.

Previously, member Robert F. MacMackin had supported the
